

Better health and care for all across Sussex

The way health and care works across Sussex is changing to help give local people what they need to live longer healthier lives.

We know that individuals and communities are not always getting the support, treatment and care they need at the time they need it in the most appropriate place. To address this, we need all organisations responsible for health and care to work closer together.

We are developing our 'Sussex Health and Care System' to help:

- Support people to live for longer in good health.
- Make sure our disadvantaged communities get the care they need.
- Improve people's experience of using services.
- Better support health and care staff.
- Make better use of the resources available.

The new way of working will involve health and care organisations coming together as the Health and Care Assembly, a new NHS organisation called NHS Sussex and new partnerships of health and care organisations working locally.

These changes alone will not tackle all the issues we face, but they will provide a way of working where people and organisations can work more closely together to provide better health and care for all now and in the future.
